2002 IN REVIEW

- 2,971 victims of sexual assault were assisted
- 1,634 people received crisis intervention, support, information and referral
- 1,136 children, teens and adults received legal advocacy
- 87 children and teens received medical evaluations and advocacy

- 225 children and their families received assessment and therapy
- 910 families received advocacy and education related to the victimization of a child
- 56 adults received therapy connected with their abuse as children

Note: In many cases, individuals received more than one service.

thank you

from the president & executive director

When you look through a kaleidoscope, you see the world in a whole new way. At KCSARC, our job is to see sexual assault in new ways.

We help victims with counseling and navigating the legal system, educate today's youth, and provide 24-hour resource information. These are core activities that our dedicated staff accomplishes unceasingly. Yet we are not satisfied to just get our work done.

The passion of our organization is fueled by a real desire to change the world. We are dedicated to end sexual assault—to lift the blight of darkness and despair this crime brings to its prey and our community.

It is our job to constantly fight sexual assault. We gather information on trends, engage in innovative teaching approaches, work with law enforcement agencies, and speak out to end the silence. We thank you, large and small, for all your continuing support as we could not do this work without your partnership.

Let us continue to end the silence that protects the perpetrators of sexual assault, and see new ways to bring brightness and hope to our world.

Paul Elliott
President, Board of Trustees

Mary Ellen Stone, MS
Executive Director

when you're looking for someone to trust

for people in crisis

You can count on a KCSARC professional to answer the phone at three in the morning. You can count on a KCSARC legal advocate to be with your child when you're barred from the courtroom. You can come to us with questions and we'll find the answers. You can trust us to care for abused kids until they are whole again. You can count on us to keep finding new and better ways to educate today's youth and the community. And you can count on us to end the silence.

We are proud of our 27-year legacy of serving those in need, all at no charge.

wrestling with tough topics

Collaborating with Seattle Children's Theatre, KCSARC reached over 1,000 students with the production of The Wrestling Season during the first quarter of 2002. This play, set in a high school, deals with the destructive power of rumors, homophobia, bullying and sexual assault. Over a two-month period, KCSARC produced over 50 workshops with local teens. Teachers reported a definite difference between those students who participated in The Wrestling Season and those who did not.

a KCSARC star

Lindsay Palmer, director of education at KCSARC, was given King County Municipal League's 2002 Citizen of the Year award for her work. Lindsay has been helping communities create meaningful strategies to co-exist with known sex offenders. She attends countless community notification meetings to contend with misinformation and fear. "Often when people come, they are understandably agitated," Palmer said. "We give them tools to keep themselves safe and help them channel their emotions to make a positive impact in their neighborhoods."

we moved!

Now that we have moved from cramped offices to our new space, we see what a difference it makes! We deliberately assigned all the offices with windows to our counseling staff, as our old therapy rooms were small and windowless. Children who have been abused now have room to move about when they engage in play therapy. All this is important as confined spaces can make these kids feel trapped.

thank you KING 5

KING 5 TV and KCSARC created a partnership in 2002 that supports our prevention and education work. Joyce Taylor, an Emmy-award winning anchor, was featured as KCSARC's spokeswoman. Her gracious style in delivering a difficult, but direct, message resulted in a dramatic increase of calls to our Resource Line.

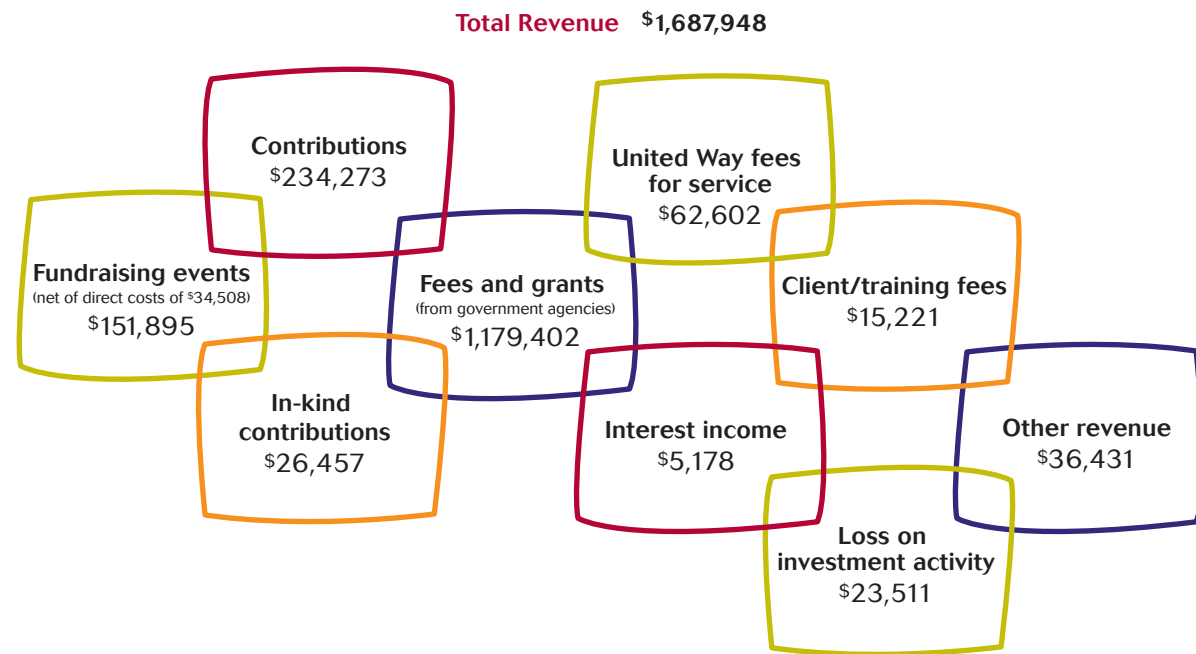

good morning Puget Sound

Many KCSARC supporters attended KCSARC breakfasts in 2002 to help victims of sexual assault. Seattle's Valentine's Day event raised over $236,000. In Enumclaw over $7,000 was raised, in Auburn $16,000, and in Renton $13,000. Inspirational speakers at our annual events share stories of the devastation of sexual assault and the healing KCSARC has brought to their lives.

still the best

KCSARC was again chosen as the best non-profit to work for by Washington CEO. The agency was also recognized with the 2002 "Business Excellence" award from the Renton Chamber of Commerce and "Advancing the Status of Women" award from Soroptimists International of Auburn.
